Campaign Season Starts Aug. 21 Who's Running? Not Running?

by Kathleen Gallagher

Ready to start talking about the November election? No, no, not THAT November election. The Greenbelt City Council election, which happens every two years.

Although pre-election buzz has been more noticeable this year than in 2015, it's been long on gossip and short on facts. That will start to change soon. In a little more than two weeks, incumbents and the challengers will begin circulating petitions and filing papers to have their names placed on the ballot for the Tuesday, November 7, 2017 city election.

Candidate packets containing all the necessary information and forms for running for office will be available at the city clerk's office in the Municipal Building, 25 Crescent Road, beginning Monday, August 21. Candidates may file until 5 p.m. on Monday, September 25.

No separate contest is held to run for the office of mayor. Both the mayor and mayor pro tem are elected by the city council. While the council is authorized by the city charter to select whichever of its members it chooses to fill these positions, it traditionally has elected the two members who received the highest and second-highest number of votes in the city election.

Every Vote Does Count

Voters sometimes say it is not worth their while to come out and vote if who will be elected to council appears to be a foregone conclusion. In this case, however, when the positions of mayor and mayor pro tem will almost surely be determined on the basis of the votes of the residents, it is no exaggeration to say that, in city elections, every vote counts.

Forms, Forms, Forms

To run for office, would-be candidates must complete the following forms, most of which must be notarized, and submit them to the city clerk for certification no later than 5 p.m. on September 25. A nomination

Proposal for New Townhomes Presented to the City Council

by James Giese

The July 24 Greenbelt City Council worksession was to have been a brainstorming session about what to do next in light of the General Services Administration's decision to cancel the project to build a new FBI facility, possibly at the Greenbelt Metro Station. However, two other items had to be added to the meeting, leaving little time to brainstorm (see separate story). Instead, much of council's time was occupied by problems in building a connecting path from the new development at the Greenbelt Metro Station (also a separate story) and a proposal for townhouse development next to Capitol Office Park and the Federal District Courthouse on Cherrywood Lane. Because of the large number of people in attendance for this matter, it became the first item to be considered by council.

History

All the land north of Cherrywood Lane between Kenilworth Avenue and the Capital Beltway was a part of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, except for three privately held small parcels totaling 15.9 acres that for many years have been owned by the owners of Capital Office Park. The courthouse was built on a portion of Beltsville Agricultural Research Center land. The three privately held parcels are within the city limits and originally purchased by the Federal government for the Greenbelt project in the mid-1930s.

When the government sold Greenbelt in the early 1950s, a partnership acquired these parcels and the land that became Capital Office Park. Later, the partnership was restructured with some developing the hotel that is now a Marriott. The remainder developed the office park in the 1980s, but not the three parcels.

Subsequently the partnership sold Capital Office Park and the three parcels to Mack-Cali, a real estate investment trust, and more recently Mack-Cali put all its Greenbelt land up for sale.

John Pellerito, director of Cushman-Wakefield, a commercial real estate broker, told council of its brokering the sale of the office park in 2016 at a time when there was a high vacancy rate in the suburban commercial office building market and this office park was only 60 percent leased. Cushman-Wakefield sent notices of the sale offering to 3,600 potential buyers, heard from 13 and received three bids. The office park was sold to Morning Calm Management, LLC, of West Palm Beach, Fla., according to Pellerito, for $49,000,000 or $61.75 per square foot, far less than the estimated building replacement cost of $240 per square foot.

Townhouses

No one was interested in purchasing the three small vacant parcels. Now, homebuilder NVR, Inc., has taken an interest in buying the land to develop 163 three-to-four-story townhomes, 16 to 24 feet wide. Brian Afnan, director of NVR, told council it was seeking the city's feedback for this undertaking.

Project PB&J Greenbelt Yields 1,700 Sandwiches

Last week Acting Police Chief Thomas Kemp took part in an effort to make peanut butter and jelly sandwiches for those in need, which took place at the Physical Therapy & Sports Medicine Center in Greenbelt. Kemp was joined by Police Spokesman George Mathews, his daughter Hanna and about 45 volunteers from throughout the Greenbelt area.

The drive was a success: 1,700 peanut butter and jelly sandwiches were made, bagged, boxed and donated to Martha's Table in Washington, D.C. Martha's Table has been providing food, education and employment opportunities for those in need for over 37 years. For more information about Martha's Table, visit marthastable.org.

Council Brainstorming Session Considers Alternatives to FBI

by James Giese

County

Turner said all county, state and area city officials were disappointed with the GSA decision. However, he "would not foreclose us from doing an alternative." He noted the city had already sent a letter requesting GSA to consider the Metro station site for other federal projects. He suggested sending another letter saying that the Greenbelt Station planned development "was still open for business."

Councilmember Judith Davis noted that the State Highway Administration had announced it had shelved the planning of additional interchange roads from the Capital Beltway to the Metro station even though the work "was 90 percent done." She urged the city and county to advocate to the state that it keep the project going forward.

Davis also said the city needed to work with the county Economic Development Council. "We can't do it on our own," she said.

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked Turner how the city could get the county to be more supportive, noting the county's efforts in College Park and Largo. Turner responded, "You have to be the catalyst." The county will come in to assist, he said, but the city needs to tell the county what it wants in the way of help.

Letters to the Editor

Just Say No

The energy companies are back trying to sign up Greenbelt residents. It's a form of door-to-door salesmanship and uses all the same lines, like "I'm signing up all your neighbors."

One salesperson pretended to actually be working with Pepco and asked to have my account number — a sure way to get your account hacked — or a bill. Go paperless and like me, you can truthfully say "I don't have one." I scammed him back, said I couldn't get into my account to give him the number, and couldn't get Pepco on the phone. He asked to come in. Never let a stranger into your house.

I asked for a card to pretend I would get back to him. Didn't get one. Put up a sign: No door to door. Energy companies, this includes you.

Whoever shows up, say no. Go online and look for reviews of the company first. Most of them do one of two things. Either they only give you a one-year contract and then as much as double your price, or the low fixed price only applies during seasons of low use and there are big surcharges for AC or, in GHI, heating, which is often electrical. Some of them make cancellation so hard it takes months while they dole out new rules you have to follow or "lose" your records. That's aside from rudeness, intimidation, abusive and even racist remarks. Say no.

Never sign an agreement unless you get possession of it and can read it in private without the sales rep breathing down your neck, when you have time. Any company that won't let you do that doesn't deserve your money.

Patricia Heil

Editor's Note:

The News Review contacted the Greenbelt Police Department to see if this kind of scam was widespread in Greenbelt. George Mathews, Greenbelt Police Department's public information officer responded:

I have not heard of this type of scam locally, but this sort of thing involving utility companies has occurred in the past. Please cut and paste this link for details: www.firstenergycorp.com/content/fecorp/newsroom/news_articles/firstenergy-launches-scam-and-fraud-information-website.html.

I would also advise that residents verify that whatever utility company they're dealing with is reputable. Contact the Better Business Bureau. Do an internet search. If in doubt, stop the interaction. And if they persist, contact police.

Additionally, the Prince George's County Health Department is hosting immunization clinics for youth (up to age 18) with limited or no health insurance.

ance at two locations: Cheverly Health Center, 3003 Hospital Drive in Cheverly and D. Leonard Dyer Regional Health Center, 9314 Piscataway Road in Clinton. To make an appointment contact 301-583-3386.

On Screen

Sexual Tension North and South

Two new movies are coming to Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, August 4: The Beguiled and Maudie, the latter set in Nova Scotia, the former set in Civil War Virginia.

The Beguiled

The Beguiled is a remake of Don Siegel's 1971 effort starring Clint Eastwood, but Director/Writer Sophia Coppola severely revises that version, putting female agency front and center.

Colin Farrell is John McBurney, a wounded Yankee soldier taken into the asylum of Nicole Kidman's (Martha Farnsworth's) girls school. The seven women react differently to the disturbing, charming Yankee. Is he the enemy? A guest? A fairy tale prince or ogre?

Sumptuous photography, psychological and sexual tension abound, with Kirsten Dunst and Elle Fanning contributing mightily.

Running time: 1 hour, 33 minutes

Rating: R

Director: Sophia Coppola

Maudie

Maudie is the achingly beautiful, quite bizarre love story of Nova Scotia's beloved self-taught semi-invalid (arthritic) folk artist Maud Lewis (Sally Hawkins), who escapes the oppressive control of her aunt by becoming the live-in housekeeper of her eventual fisherman husband Everett Lewis (Ethan Hawke).

Sally Hawkins thrilled moviegoers in 2008 in Mike Leigh's Happy-Go-Lucky, you may recall.

Running time: 1 hour, 55 minutes

Rating: PG-13

Director: Aisling Walsh

Corrections

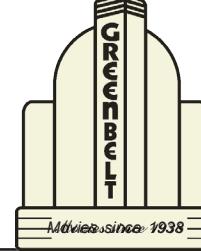

In last week's issue in an article about Greenbelt CARES and Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL), Sharon Johnson was incorrectly identified.

Our story in the July 27 issue on the city council's worksession with Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) incorrectly identified City Manager Nicole Ard as having brought the list of proposed regulations for a Greenbelt Neighborhood Conservation Overlay Zone to GHI's attention. It was Acting Director of Planning Terri Hruby who notified GHI General Manager Eldon Ralph.

Contra Dance

The Greenbelt Recreation Department and the Folklore Society of Greater Washington welcome beginners as well as experienced dancers to a contra dance on Saturday, August 5 at the Community Center gym. The dance begins at 7 p.m. and beginner lessons start at 6:30 p.m. April Blum will be calling to the music of Transatlantic Crossing with the Gardner family of Greenbelt. There is a cash-only admission fee; children age 6 and under are admitted free.

Contra dance is not only fun, but it is also very social and a great way to meet new people and get lots of exercise. It is danced to live music, which can have an array of instruments depending on the band. There is a caller who calls the dance by doing a walk-through before each dance. Once you get the moves for the dance, the pattern just repeats itself. At the beginning of each evening dance, there is a 30-minute lesson to go over all the basic steps that will be called.

Call 240-542-2054 for more information.

Greenbelter Carissa Ralbovsky Wins National Service Award

by Lauren Cummings

On July 13, Greenbelt resident Carissa Ralbovsky was named a co-recipient of the 2017 George A. Bell Service Award by the National Association of State Budget Officers. The award, named after the organization's first full-time executive director, recognizes state budget personnel for outstanding contributions and service to public budgeting and management.

Ralbovsky is budget supervisor for Public Safety and Environment in the Maryland Department of Budget and Management. In this position she is responsible for writing budget instructions for other state agencies, analyzing agency budget requests, and providing general fiscal policy and management support, advice and consultation to the governor, state agencies, the legislature and other government officials.

This award specifically recognized her outstanding leadership and contributions to the development and management of a more efficient and automated process.

The nomination noted that "Carissa joined the budget office in 2013 and within three years she transformed one of the major processes in the Office of Budget

Analysis. This work was outside of her assigned responsibilities but she saw something that needed improvement and took responsibility for ensuring that change occurred."

Ralbovsky rewrote budget instructions, held numerous trainings on the system and worked with the information technology department to post the data to a new online format. Her implementation of a significant change process was extended to all of the state agencies within the past year, saving time for staff across Maryland, and saving the state money.

Turner noted that a new retail study by the county had been released. The study stresses the need for a point person for retail development. Davis asked staff to obtain copies of the report.

Councilmember Konrad Herling pointed out that of the five major cities within the county, Greenbelt was the only one without an economic development director. Turner responded he would leave that matter up to the city.

Herling also proposed establishing a circulator bus within the city and asked Turner if the city should pursue exploring this with the county. Turner responded that Bowie had studied the idea and it had not proved to be workable there. He felt there would be insufficient ridership to be successful.

Innovative Center

Walters advocated the city becoming an "innovative center, particularly in robotics and artificial intelligence." She noted the city's proximity to Goddard Space Flight Center and the University of Maryland. She felt the city should labor to have the Metro station site become a technology center. Such development would provide internships and high-paying jobs for the Greenbelt area.

Walters also advocated green, sustainable housing construction and electric power independence by implementing solar field technology.

Lastly, she urged the city to have 10-, 20-, 40- and 50-year plans. "What do you want? Think big," she advocated.

Jordan asked Walters if the Greenbelt Community Development Corporation meetings were open and who was on board. She responded that there would be monthly meetings and that by-laws for the organization were being drafted. Presently there were "about four" members but Walters invited more to join.

Beltway Plaza

Kapastin said Beltway Plaza had been "his baby" for 28 years.

He noted it was 99.5 percent leased. While that was good, he noted it could be temporary. The center is paying Greenbelt's "exorbitant" licensing fees plus taxes. He noted that retail business was under a lot of pressure. On-line purchasing is reducing the need for brick-and-mortar businesses.

When driving around Greenbelt, Kapastin said he noted fewer people on the street than in other areas and those seen were not as young nor as rich and were not buying at Beltway Plaza. Greenbelters should buy locally, he advocated. "The Beltway Plaza should be a destination place," he said.

Previously, Kapastin proposed converting the shopping center into a town center format and adding residential units, ideas that have failed to obtain city council support. He again told council of the need to modernize the center. He thought there was a need to emphasize development of more food and entertainment facilities and items that cannot be purchased over the internet.

He advocated more interaction with the arts. He felt that such efforts could begin right now. It was noted that a new restaurant, Charbroil and Grill, was to open that same week.

South Core

Norman Rivera, representing Greenbelt Station South Core developer NVR, noted his client's continuing effort to complete a connecting trail from the South Core to the Metro station. When asked the status of the North Core development agreement between WMATA and developer Renard Development Company, LLC, the response was that it was in a state of flux but still intact.

Gooseberries Now at Market

by Kathryn Beard

I thought I would introduce you to an unusual fruit around for only about a month each summer, gooseberries. These small round grape-like fruits contain small seeds like purple grapes, have the same texture inside, come in a variety of colors from green to purple, usually are a little harder and taste a little sour to sweet depending on ripeness. The apple stand at the Farmers Market has had them for three weeks already and said more continue to grow. Try something new today!

The Woodlands of GHI Benefit the Community

by Kathie Jarva

Canyon Creek trail, part of GHI woodlands, starts off Ridge Rd.

The City of Greenbelt and Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) are known for the woods, and that's how everyone likes it. But the woods aren't just there; they need care and understanding, like all living things. Greenbelt has placed much of its wooded land into a forest preserve. GHI has placed much of their wooded land into a Forest Conservation Management Agreement (FCMA). The FCMA is between owner of the land, GHI, and Prince George's County and the State of Maryland, tax authorities. The city and the GHI situations are not the same. Locally, when the term Preserve or Forest Preserve is used, it generally refers to the city-owned woods. The GHI-owned woods are usually referred to as simply "the woodlands."

The GHI Woodlands Committee looks after the GHI woodlands, under the auspices of the GHI board of directors and with the help of the GHI maintenance director. The Woodlands Committee is made up of interested GHI member volunteers approved by the board. The committee meets monthly and sponsors regular events related to the woodlands. Everyone is welcome to attend the meetings, which are held on the third Wednesday of each month at 7 p.m. in the GHI Administration Building. There is a growing Friends of the Woodlands Committee, folks who volunteer to help on specific tasks or who adopt an area of GHI woodlands to steward.

The GHI Woodlands Committee tends the woodlands as directed by the FCMA. The FCMA dictates various management practices and in return the county and state give GHI significant tax breaks on the relevant acreage, thus saving all GHI members real estate tax dollars that would otherwise have to be collected as part of monthly member fees.

Fighting non-native invasive vegetation is a major task of the Woodlands Committee, as is trail maintenance and community education. The committee, working with members of the city's Forest Preserve Advisory Board and Public Works Department, is also trying to locate the boundary lines between the city and GHI within the wooded areas and especially along the many GHI woodlands trails.

The GHI woodlands are managed for the benefit of the community to provide improved air quality, erosion abatement and recreation. The trails are minimally maintained for able-bodied individuals to walk or hike in a safe, natural environment without undue impediments. Large logs are removed, vegetation is kept from encroaching on the trails and some stream crossings are provided. The trails are not intended for wheeled devices; the paved pathways of GHI are available for those activities.

Those with suggestions or requests regarding the GHI woodlands should come to a Woodlands Committee meeting. Community feedback is important and the committee appreciates the opportunity to share woodland interests. George Bachman, GHI director of maintenance, GBachman@GHI.coop, may also be contacted.

There is a map of the GHI woodlands on the Woodlands Committee page of the GHI website, ghi.coop/content/woodlands-committee. The committee updates the maps with new trail names, landmarks and recognition of the boundaries. Agenda and minutes of Woodlands Committee meetings and other files of interest are also available at that website.

Enjoy and be kind to all the Greenbelt woods and to woodlands everywhere.

WMATA Notes Roadblocks On Greenbelt Station Trail

by James Giese

After meeting earlier this year with Metro officials to implement construction of a temporary trail to connect the new homes in Greenbelt Station South Core with the Greenbelt Metro station, city officials and new residents believed that the project would be put on track. However, recent preliminary comments by Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) staff at a field meeting with city planners reveal new roadblocks for the project. Council discussed the status of this project at a July 24 worksession.

The temporary trail was to be put in place until the connector road that is to run from Greenbelt Road to the Capital Beltway is built. That will happen when the North Core property, the Metro station parking lot, is developed with mixed use office-commercial-residential. It was hoped that would take place soon if the Metro site were selected for construction of the new FBI headquarters. WMATA staff had been reluctant to build a temporary trail if the site was to be selected for the FBI because a new parking garage that needed to be built would obstruct the trail route.

However, at the earlier meeting, Metro officials appeared to be more open to the temporary construction even though the FBI site decision was still in limbo. They promised to look at the proposal and quickly get back to the city.

While that promise was kept, Community Planner Jessica Bellah, said that acting on these preliminary comments could triple construction costs, delay construction and be of uncertain benefit, depending upon when development does take place on the Metro site. More detailed written comments from WMATA will be forthcoming in the next few weeks, she reported.

New Requirements

Bellah noted the following modifications:

As proposed, the trail would have crossed the entry road from eastbound Capital Beltway to reach the station. However, the grade necessary to cross the access road would not satisfy the Americans with Disabilities Act standards and the trail would have to be bent further east, away from the station, crossing after the access road merges with a ring road around the metered parking lot. After the crossing, the temporary path would have to double back on the other side of the road, cross a parking lot driveway entrance and then re-cross the ring road to access the station.

A fence would need to be installed to prevent short-cutting.

A traffic signal would need to be installed at the first crossing.

Cameras would need to be installed at the crossing.

Hard line call boxes would need to be installed.

There would need to be a power connection separate from the Metro power connection.

A speed study and a traffic engineering study would be needed to determine the placement of the signal.

Area lighting would likely need to be upgraded in the vicinity of the trail.

City staff estimates a six-month delay to assess WMATA comments.

Construction costs could rise from around a half-million dollars to around a million-and-a-half.

The earliest the trail could be constructed is two years, staff estimates.

Comments

Bellah told the council that the benefit of the temporary trail is unknown as it is dependent on how long it may be used before being replaced by a permanent road and sidewalks. That, in turn, is dependent on when, if ever, the property is developed.

Norman Rivera, representing South Core builder NVR, told council that his client wants to push through the trail construction. NVR is committed to doing it, he said. He also noted that the new homeowners were anxious to see the trail connection built.

The developers are currently providing bus service to the Metro station, but this commitment is to end this year.

Mayor Emmett Jordan declared the preliminary comments to be "a disheartening decision."

Bellah told council that staff would request another worksession at a later date, once formal comments are received. Concurrently, city and WMATA staff are working on a legal agreement, she noted. The developer had agreed to allocate $516,000 for the project, but additional costs are unfunded, she added. Staff would explore the possibility of grants.

Councilmembers expressed the belief that WMATA should be participating more in the project. Councilmember Rodney Roberts opined that the city should build the trail up to the WMATA property line and WMATA should do the rest.

Jordan suggested considering an alternative route. Bellah responded that this had been previously considered and this route had been determined to be the best. There are environmental issues involved in alternative routes. However, she suggested that constructing a boardwalk might be a possible alternative consideration.

Residents present thanked councilmembers for their support. It was noted that the developer continues to advertise walking access to the station, although one sign at the development entrance had been removed. They raised the question of whether the developer could provide more funds for the project.

Councilmember Judith Davis responded that the development had provided the city with additional funds, but these were allocated to other uses. She doubted that the developer would be willing to increase its commitment.

Snippets from the Past

Telephone Hints

It is a well-known fact that the telephone is playing a vital part in the war effort. This is particularly true in the Washington area, where so many important war calls originate and terminate. It seems entirely reasonable, therefore, that telephone users should heed the many appeals of the telephone company to be careful of the use of the service.

Here in Greenbelt many of the telephones are on what are known as party lines. Most of these party lines have four parties on them. When one party is using the line none of the other three parties can use it, nor can anyone call them. From a good neighbor point of view as well as for patriotic reasons all party line telephone users should be as brief as possible in their telephone conversations and should use their telephone only when it is really necessary. Whether through carelessness or not, many Greenbelt party line users continue to hold lengthy and unnecessary conversations, thereby tying up the equipment so that necessary calls cannot be made.

There are other bothersome and harmful practices that seem to be prevalent particularly here in Greenbelt. One is the practice of answering the ring of some other party on the line. Another is allowing young children to use the telephone as a plaything, causing unnecessary interference with the service. And another is that of pranksters using the telephone for practical jokes.

Citizens of Greenbelt, the telephone company is making every effort to give us swift and efficient telephone service, even in war time. Let us all do our best to help.

County's Pet Waste Campaign Expands to Include Greenbelt

by Erin Josephitis

The City of Greenbelt Public Works Department, GHI's Companion Animal Committee and Prince George's County Department of Environment (DEP) have partnered up to remind dog owners to stop "poo-llution" by always picking up or "scooping the poop."

Greenbelt's pet waste campaign encourages owners to throw out dog waste using a bio-degradable bag or flush waste – but not the bag – down the toilet. Take multiple bags on walks, just in case. Avoid letting a dog defecate within 200 feet of a water body. Additionally, keep an eye out in your own yard and scoop immediately every time. Never throw dog waste in a compost bin or down a storm drain. Volunteer to stencil storm drain inlets by contacting DEP at 301-883-5822.

What happens if you don't scoop the poop? Pet waste is more than smelly and unsightly: it is a health risk to the environment, pets and people, especially children. Whenever it rains, pet waste left on the ground gets flushed into the nearest storm drain, stream, river, lake and, ultimately, the Chesapeake Bay. It adds unsafe levels of bacteria and nutrients to local waters when not disposed of properly, making the water unfit for irrigation, recreation or other uses.

Furthermore, it is against the law in the City of Greenbelt and Prince George's County to leave pet waste upon public or private property and could result in a municipal infraction. Refer to City Code Chapter 3 (Animals), Sec. 3-66 Defecation; removal of excrement at greenbeltdmd.gov/documentcenter/View/46. Likewise, the GHI Member Handbook states "no condition in violation of health and safety shall be allowed, e.g., pet feces must be promptly removed and properly disposed of." The GHI Member Handbook reinforces "companion animal guardians/custodians shall keep their unit and yard clean and sanitary and promptly remove and dispose of feces deposited by their companion animal(s) in both their own and other members' yards and common areas, including on sidewalks."

Help spread the word, join the campaign and get others involved, installing pet disposal facilities, poop scoopers and other convenient items to encourage owners to clean up after their pets. Most importantly, always clean up after your dog on walks and remind others to do the same. After all, less pet waste on the ground means a happier and healthier watershed for all.

Burglary

July 25, 9:38 a.m., 6900 block Hanover Parkway. A person who was inside his home heard a noise at a window and observed a man pulling off the window screen. The man then fled on foot toward the 7000 block Hanover Parkway.

Vandalism

July 20, 4:27 p.m., 100 block Westway. The glass entry door of an apartment building was broken by a brick.

July 26, 3:05 p.m., 7800 block Mandan Road. A marker was used to put graffiti on the inside wall of an apartment stairwell.

Vehicle Crime

Two vehicles were stolen. A white 2002 Ford F-150 pickup truck with Md. tags 70246CF was taken from the 9100 block Springhill Lane. A silver 4-door 2005 Mercury Marquis with Md. tags 3AX4089 was taken from the 5800 block Cherrywood Terrace.

Four tires and rims were taken from single vehicles in the 8000 block Greenbelt Station Parkway, 9100 block Springhill Lane and 7700 block Hanover Parkway. One tire and rim was also taken from the 7700 block Hanover Parkway.

Two thefts occurred after windows were broken in the 6300 block Golden Triangle Drive (video game player) and 7800 block Mandan Road (sunglasses).

A purse, iPad and cell phone were taken in the 6000 block Greenbelt Road from a vehicle trunk that was possibly left ajar. A baseball bat was taken from 2 Court Eastway.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter.

GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

petition bearing the signatures of at least 50 registered city voters must be obtained. Each petition page identifies the candidate, the candidate's address of legal residence, and the signature and residence address of the person circulating that page of the petition.

An acceptance of the nomination form certifies the nominee's commitment to serve if elected. An affidavit of candidate form provides personal identifying information.

A detailed financial disclosure statement provides for a declaration of business, investment and real estate interests held by the nominee and immediate family, as well as sources of specified income and debt. Incumbent candidates who have already filed their forms for 2016 are not required to file again if their circumstances have not changed.

In addition, candidates must submit a form designating their appointed treasurer and including the person's acceptance of appointment in writing.

Ballot

As soon as the September 25 filing deadline has passed at 5 p.m., the ballot can be established. At 7:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building, the candidates will draw for ballot position by lottery. In a second drawing, they choose the location of their election signs on poles to be posted in designated locations by the city. The city's Board of Elections oversees these drawings, which are open to the public.

Penalties Are No Joke

Certified candidates must file reports of campaign contributions and expenditures at three points in time. This year the two interim reports are due by noon on Friday, September 29 and Friday, October 27, with the final report due following the election by noon on Friday, November 10. With some items excepted, candidates are required to report the totals of all contributions and expenditures and to itemize items in excess of $25. These reports are kept in the city clerk's office and are open to public inspection during business hours.

The penalties are severe for not submitting these reports on time or for failure to maintain the appointment of a treasurer. A candidate not in compliance will be deemed unqualified and the person's name will be removed from the ballot prior to the election. A candidate who falls out of compliance after the election will not be sworn in without complying. Furthermore, no one who is in violation of a city law or reporting requirement may run as a candidate or submit a nomination petition in any future city election.

Voter Registration

For anyone thinking of running for city council, signing a candidate's petition or voting in the city election, it is never too early to take care of voter registration. For anyone not already registered at a Greenbelt residence address or who needs to update registration information, the deadline for this election is Monday, October 9.

Voters can look to see if their registration information is correct by going to the voter services section (on the Hot Topics menu) of the website of the State Board of Elections at elections.state.md.us. Disregard the polling places given there, however, since with the exception of the Community Center they do not apply to city elections.

Students living in Greenbelt who are enrolled at colleges and universities in Maryland are eligible to register if they consider their school address to be their "official" or "permanent" home. Go to elections.state.md.us to register.

Anyone with a Maryland driver's license or Motor Vehicle Administration identification card can register to vote or make corrections to registration information online at the State Board of Elections website. For those who prefer paper, forms can be printed from the state website and returned by U.S. mail. Forms are also available at the public library, at the city clerk's office or from the Prince George's County Board of Elections at 301-341-7300. Paper forms must be received by the county prior to 4:30 p.m. on the October 9 deadline.

Early & Absentee Voting

More detailed information on early and absentee voting will be provided in this paper closer to the time voting begins, but the dates should be noted by people planning to run for office as well as by voters. Early voting has increased each year in Greenbelt, and the day is gone when candidates could afford to wait until Election Day to get their message out.

Early voting is available in two forms in Greenbelt. Any registered voter who prefers not to vote at the polling place (no excuse required) may vote by absentee ballot, either by U.S. mail or in person at the Municipal Building beginning Wednesday, October 18 and ending at 6 p.m. on Election Day.

Early voting by voting machine will be available to all voters in the Municipal Building at specified times from Monday, October 23 through Friday, November 3. Weekend early voting will be available to all city voters at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Club House on Saturday and Sunday, October 21 and 22, and in the Schrom Hills Park Community Room on Saturday and Sunday, October 28 and 29.

For more information on Greenbelt elections, call 301-474-8000 or check the city's website at www.greenbeltdmd.gov. Click on Government, then Election Information.

Monitoring Water Quality on Saturday

Come learn to test water quality and contribute to Greenbelt's citizen science project this Saturday, August 5 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

Wear weather-appropriate clothing and closed-toe shoes. Bring a reusable water bottle, hat and sunscreen. High school students should bring service-learning forms.

King Kirby Opens at GAC

by Jim Link

Aficionados of super-hero (and super-villain) comic books, which thrived from the 1930s until recently and are now inspiring blockbuster movies, will revel in Off The Quill's (OTQ) exciting production of King Kirby at Greenbelt Arts Center.

Make way for The Incredible Hulk, Captain America, The X-Men, The Avengers and other pop cultural icons from the teeming brain and drawing board of cartoonist Jack Kirby. Even aging curmudgeons like me will be impressed by OTQ's trademark kinetic energy, beautifully choreographed fight scenes and gripping and informative videography. Most of all, audiences will be moved by the deeply human story told by wonderfully skilled actors at the heart of all the flash, bells and whistles.

The central conceit of that story, written by wife/husband team Crystal Skillman and Fred Van Lente, is that Jack Kirby has been unfairly denied his proper, cast into the shadows by his partner, rival and sometime friend Stan Lee, a virtual demigod at contemporary comic-cons. The much slicker, ruthless Lee schmoozes businessmen, has lawyers rig contracts and runs off with the lion's share of the profit and glory.

We share Kirby's successes and woes as he narrates his rocky adolescence in a tough Jewish neighborhood on the Lower East Side where fighting Irish Catholic kids was a necessity for survival. We follow him from the poverty of his sweatshop-employed dad to his falling in love with his wife-to-be Roz, fighting Nazis in World War II, enduring anti-Semitic treatment, marriage and four kids, betrayal by Lee and eventual recognition as the genius he is at comic-cons in the 1980s.

After Kirby's death his original work sold for millions at Sotheby's in the 1990s.

King Kirby clicks beautifully on all levels. The acting and choreography, sound, lighting and skillful blocking all blend seamlessly for an hour and 40 minutes without intermission. The audience experiences constant action flowing forward without a lull or a lorgue.

Josh Mooney is superb as Jack Kirby (nee Jacob Kurtzberg):

Sean Eustis as Ant-Man, Enoch Wilson as Iron Man, Brett Cassidy as the Hulk, Josh Mooney as Jack Kirby, Jenny Oberholtzer as Roz Kirby, Jonathan Palmer as Thor, Melissa Robinson as Captain America

childlike wonder.

The supporting cast of five all play multiple roles extremely well. Brett Cassidy is hilarious as whip-cracking General George S. Patton (think George C. Scott) and pretentious auteur Frederico Fellini and Martin, Lee's greedy uncle who intermittently wheels in out of nowhere to make oafish pronouncements, then disappears backwards until his next apparition.

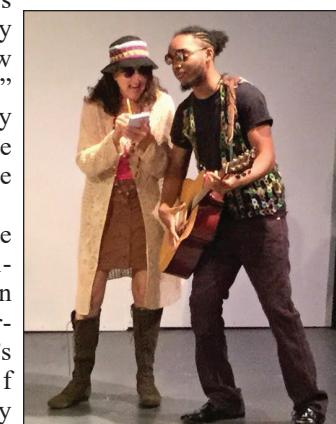

Melissa Robinson wears many hats and dresses as the Sotheby's snide auctioneer who sells Kirby's art though it "lacks the purity of a Rembrandt," a sycophantic journalist and a union leader.

Erik Harrison as Stan Lee (nee Stanley Lieber) is a worthy foil for Kirby. He morphs from nerdy office boy into a cagey power broker with Hollywood sleek good looks.

It's a pleasure to watch Mooney and Harrison unfold their finely etched character differences in their brotherly dance of rivalry, a tad like Cain and Abel.

Jenny Oberholzer is excellent as the mousy but shrewd and loving Roz who sees the very talented, very good man underneath Kirby's insecurities. Fortunately, she manipulates Kirby as a good woman should manipulate a needy man; she even sends him love poetry by Elizabeth Barrett Browning to the battlefield. When Kirby responds totally naively to Roz's tentative flirting by saying "I'll show you my etchings," she is disarmed by realizing that he actually does have etchings.

The redoubtable Michael J. Dombroski (Hamlet in an earlier appearance) plays Kirby's buddy and chief booster smoothly and loyally until a censorious comic book code, changing market forces, the responsibility of marriage and fatherhood prompt him to leave the business. Alone and vulnerable, Kirby still has his talent, doggedness and

But that's another play for another day.

Treat yourself to King Kirby on August 4, 5, 11, 12 at 8 p.m. and August 6 at 2 p.m.

Greenway Center's Music & Arts store held a studio recital for students of Madelyn Wanner, voice and piano teacher. Her students shone as they sang songs such as Singin' in the Rain, Lavender's Blue and Skyfall and played on piano Beethoven's Ode to Joy, the spiritual Standing in the Need of Prayer and Bach's Air in F Major, to name a few.

According to her website (madelynanner.com), "Ms. Wanner promotes artistic and personal growth, basic music fundamentals such as sight-singing and ear-training, a
